Construction on New Community Center to Begin in September

The Town of Lewisville will soon see construction underway for the new community center to be located adjacent to Jack Warren Park off of Lewisville-Clemmons

Road.

Town Manager Hank Perkins said the project will begin in September and is expected to be completed within the next year.

Moser Named Public Works Director

On August 10, Town Manager Hank Perkins promoted Ryan Moser to Public Works Director.

"Ryan has been serving as Acting Public Works Director since December 1st, 2019 and I have been very pleased with both his performance and his growth in this position over this time," Perkins said in an e-mail to Town officials.

Moser served the previous six years as a Public Works Maintenance Technician for the Town.

Moser, a native of Pfafftown, said he enjoys working in the small town setting we have and the great coworkers I share the day with.

"In the six years that I have been in Lewisville, I have learned a lot," said Moser. "I became certified as a stormwater inspector

From your Mayor Not Just Another School Year

Mike Horn

When I was in elementary school, this time of year at summer's end, my mom and I would take a day trip from our little island in the Florida Keys to the mainland to buy clothes on sale for the new school year.

Usually a couple pair of pants, a couple of shirts, a new pair of shoes and of course underwear. Socks weren't on the list because most of time we didn't wear any, and I didn't need shorts because I had cutoffs from the long-pants I wore the previous year.

When I was in high school this was the time of year when we "local boys" anxiously waited the first day of school to see if any new prospects for romance had moved to the island over the summer.

Occasionally, a real beauty would appear creating a testosterone tremor throughout the junior and senior class. But more often it was the "local girls" not seen over summer, who underwent an amazing transformation from just girls, to the beginnings of womanhood.

It was in this early fall of September, after surviving football practice during the hot, sultry dog days of August, that we looked forward with excitement to our first game. A time of unbridled enthusiasm believing that no one could beat us this year. But of course, after our first game, it became obvious that was not to be the case. An occasional lesson in humility was good for boys our age.

Life was sweet. There was so much to look forward to, returning to school.

That's why my heart truly aches for our kids this year. With great expectations I'm sure so many looked forward to returning to school. Being with their buddies, building friendships that will last a lifetime. And yes, maybe even learning a thing or two.

My heart also aches for our parents who are having to make very difficult choices. Some trying to manage their careers, and others just how to manage paying the rent and putting food on the table. This is the time when our humanity and compassion for each other will be tested.

I think about our teachers, particularly in elementary school who, over the school years, form such tight bonds, and a true love for the kids in their class. They need our help and encouragement and support. Now more than ever.

I know that despite this short hand they have been dealt, our teachers will continue to do whatever they can, however they can, just as they have always done, to make sure our kids have a good education.

As I have reflected on this time of year when I was in school, I hope our kids, teachers and parents, years from now, will remember this as a time when we didn't surrender to circumstance. We looked adversity in the face, discovered the true depth of our humanity and found within ourselves the ingenuity and determination to achieve great things.

As always, I welcome your comments.
